The House substitute provides for $2.7 trillion in deficit reduction and a $2.5 trillion increase in the debt limit in two stages, with the two debt ceiling increases being conditioned upon enactment of an initial set of spending cuts and a later, second deficit reduction measure. The measure initially produces $915 billion in savings through FY 2021, primarily by capping discretionary spending each year. It creates a 12-member joint congressional committee to develop a plan for an additional $1.8 trillion in deficit reduction that Congress would vote on in December.

8/1/11 - S.365 : Budget Control Act of 2011

- A reduction in spending of more than the increase in the the debt limit. In the first installment ("tranche"), $917 billion would be cut over 10 years in exchange for increasing the debt limit by $900 billion.
- The agreement establishes a joint "super committee" (composed of six Democrats and six Republicans) of Congress that would produce debt reduction legislation by November 23, 2011, that would be immune from amendments or filibuster. The goal of the legislation is to cut at least $1.5 trillion over the coming 10 years and be passed by December 23, 2011. The committee would have 12 members, 6 from each party.
 - Total potential savings: $2.4 trillion.
